

SATURDAY SELECTS

Week of February 4, 2019

by Monica Khemsurov

A weekly Saturday recap to share with you our favorite links, discoveries, exhibitions, and more from the past seven days. This week: Highlights from Zona Maco, a new gallery in Brooklyn launching epic works by Mimi Jung, and three retail interiors with absolutely perfect color palettes, like the Chinese womenswear store above.

If you're in Brooklyn between now and March 17, don't miss the inaugural show at the new East Williamsburg gallery Carvalho Park, which pairs new works by L.A. fiber artist Mimi Jung with beautiful, storybook-esque paintings by Delphine Hennelly. (I feel the need to mention here that Carvalho Park is less than four blocks away from my first New York apartment, where I lived from 2001-2004, and it's blowing my mind that the same neighborhood now has a gallery of this caliber. Crazy.)